Lucy was excited. At the same time, she was a little nervous. Today was the day of her first soccer game. She put on her shoes and tied her hair back. Her heart raced as she stepped onto the field. The whistle blew and the game began.

At first, Lucy's teammates were unsure about her abilities. They whispered to each other, expressing their doubts. "Do you think Lucy can score a goal?" one teammate asked. "I don't know," another replied. This made Lucy feel disappointed but she pushed those thoughts aside.

Lucy tried to remember all the things she learned at practice. She ran fast, kept her eye on the ball and passed to her teammates. However, as the game went on, she noticed that her teammates were hesitating to pass the ball to her. They kept looking for other players instead. This made her feel sad and a little frustrated.

Lucy and her teammates were disheartened as the opponent scored a goal ten minutes into the game. In the last ten minutes, Lucy finally managed to gain possession of the ball. She kicked the ball with all her might and watched as it sailed into the goal. Lucy had scored her first goal! Instead of cheers, her teammates were whispering among themselves. "Wow, I can't believe she actually did it," one said. Although Lucy was happy to score, she felt her teammates still doubted her skills. She wished her teammates would trust her more.

With just a minute left, Lucy got the ball again. This time, she was determined to show her teammates what she could do. She dribbled down the field, dodged a player from the other team and took a shot. As she kicked the ball, she felt a burst of energy. The ball flew into the net and it was the winning goal!

This time, her teammates erupted in cheers. "Great job, Lucy!" they shouted. They rushed over and hugged her tightly. Lucy smiled brightly. She had proven to her teammates that she could be a valuable player on the team.
